THURSDAY EVENING NOV. 11, 1897.

KISSED NURSE IN BELLEVUE.—The case of Dr. James A. Gardner, house physician of the fourth medical division of Bellevue Hospital, is the subject of much talk among the attaches of the hospital. Dr. Gardner is under suspension pending the action of the board of directors relative to charges which have been preferred against him by Miss Agnes Brennan, directress of the Female Training School.

The charges relate that Dr. Gardner, while in the Emergency Hospital, one night two weeks ago, kissed Miss Emma Earle, one of the youngest and prettiest of the nurses there, much against the young lady's inclination. Miss Earle was so indignant, says Miss Brennan, that she came to the director's office, and made complaint of the action of the physician. Miss Brennan laid the matter before the board, which, in view of other things the physician had done, suspended him while the case is being investigated.

Miss Brennan has another grievance against Dr. Gardner, one that would not have been raked up again had not Miss Earle complained of Dr. Gardner's obscenity desires.

Back in January last a woman named Gilbert Mohr was brought to the hospital, where she became a mother. Dr. Gardner, acting as the child's godfather, had it named Agnes Brennan, because, he said, the mother desired to honor the directress. Miss Brennan was traveling in the west at the time, and when she came back she was very indignant when she heard of the affair. The matter was laid before Superintendent Murphy, who wrote Dr. Gardner a note reprimanding him for his action.
